HOW TO SURVIVE IN BEIJUM?

SUBJECTIVE ATLAS

"Subjective Atlas" is a series of maps and illustrations created by artists and researchers to depict territories from a subjective perspective. Unlike traditional maps, the focus is on personal perceptions, cultural features, and unique viewpoints of the authors. These atlases often combine art, sociology, and anthropology, inviting viewers to see the world through the lens of individual experiences and stories. They may include not only geographical data but also emotional, social, and cultural aspects, highlighting the diversity and richness of perceptions of the

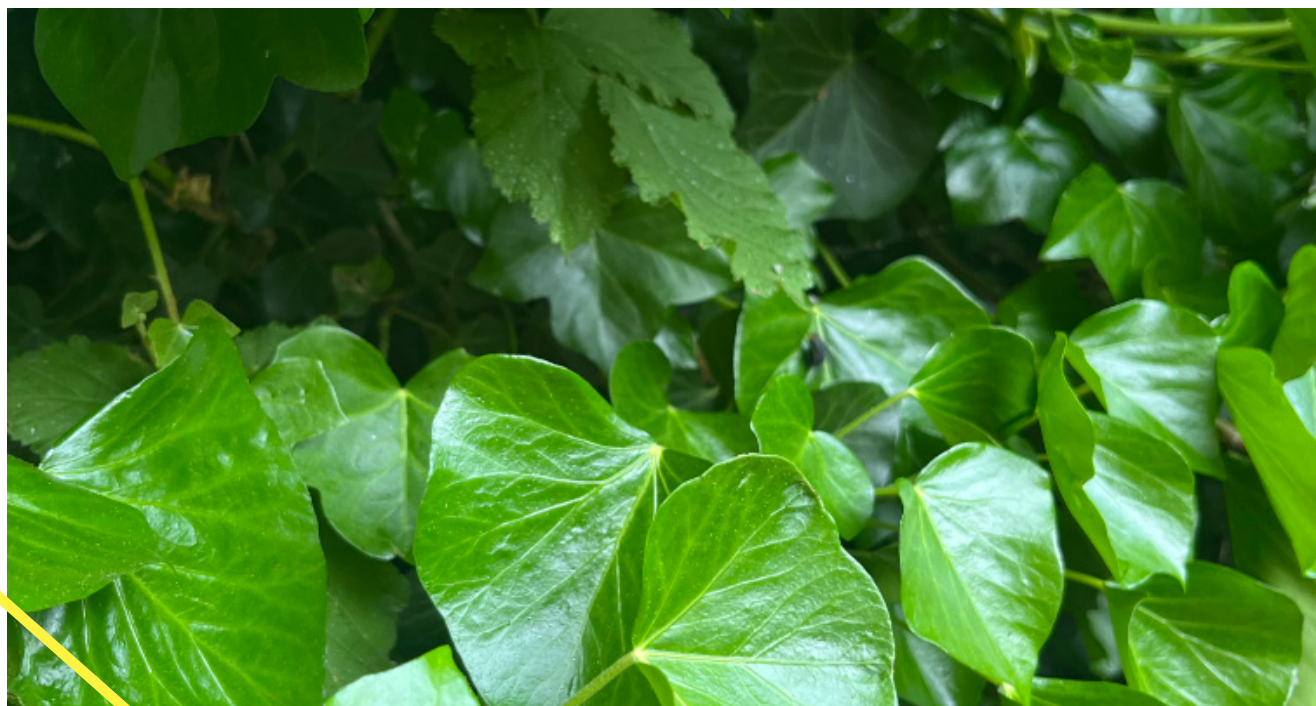

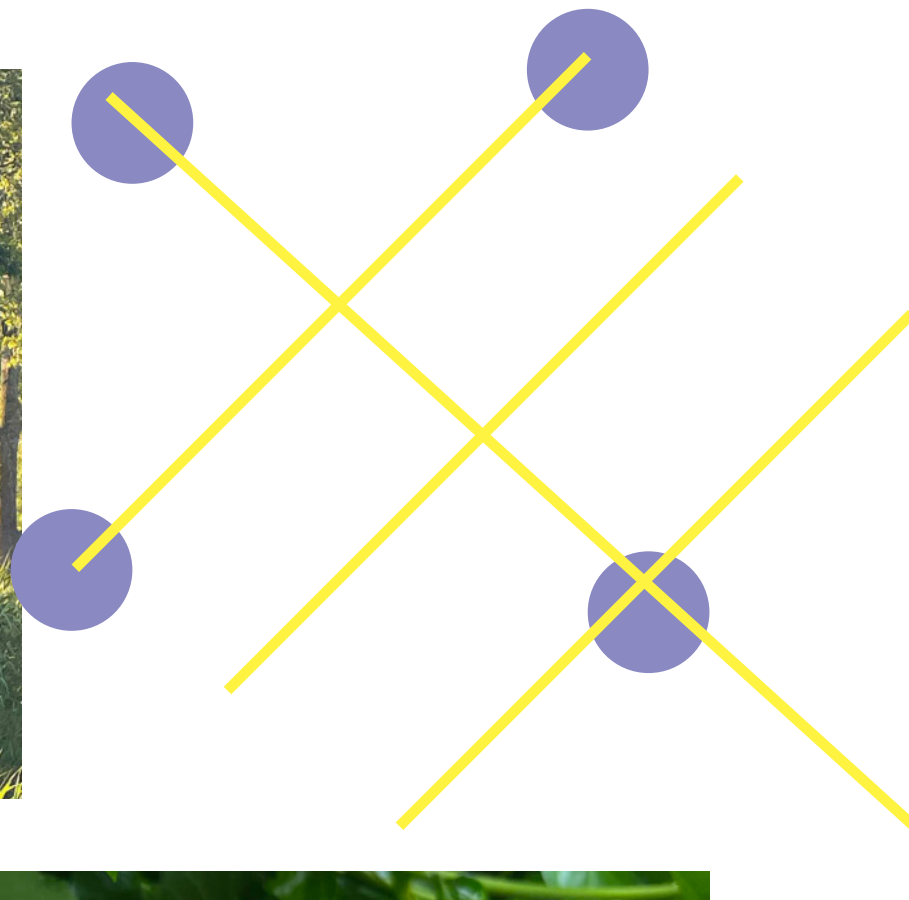

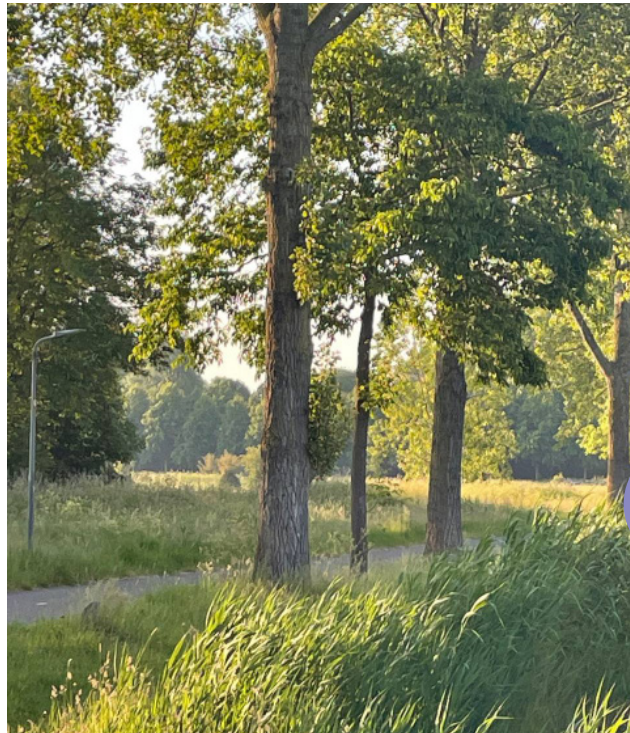

MY IDEA

O F A T L A S

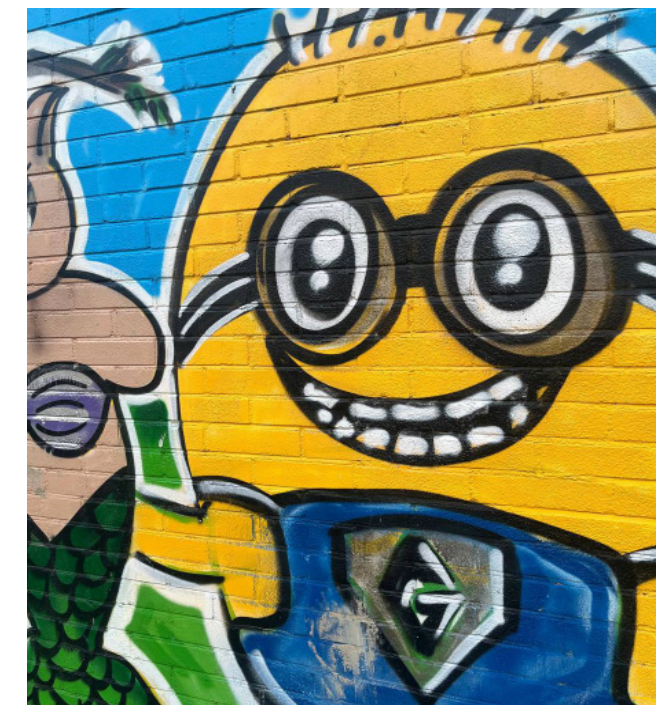

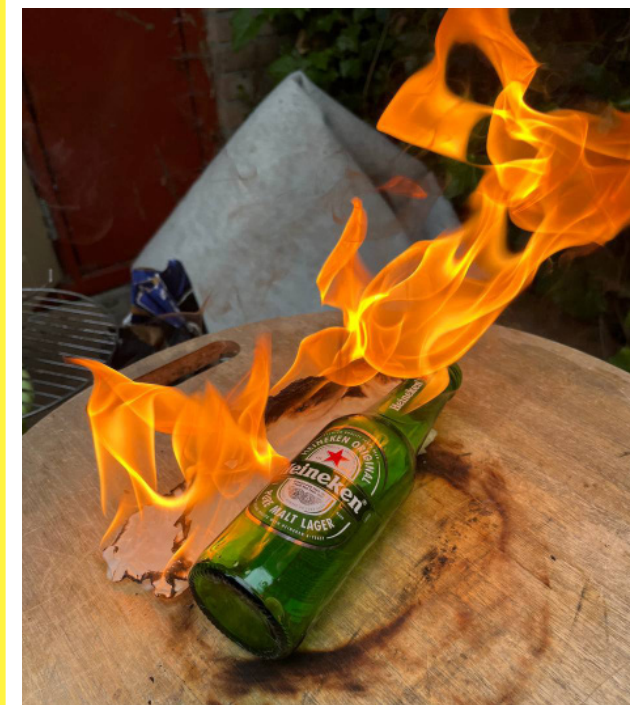

My idea is to showcase my neighborhood from a local's perspective. Through photographs, I capture everyday life, highlighting unique aspects and cultural features. By asking questions, I delve into personal experiences and stories, offering an intimate, subjective view of the area that traditional maps and guides often miss.
